Radio Commission Asks Public To Give Support To New Allocations

Commissioner Caldwell Urges That Listeners-in Disregard Sympathy Pleas of "Selfish Broadcasters," Government to Stand Firmly By Its Plan

Washington Oct 15—Appealing to public opinion to support the reallocations announced for Nov 11 by the federal radio commission and to disregard the sympathy pleas of selfish broadcasters' Commissioner O H Caldwell declared today that the government intends to stand firmly by its plan aimed at increasing the radio audience by 50,000 000

From now on till Nov 11 it is likely that public sympathy will be appealed to by some few selfish broadcasters and that aid of groups of listeners themselves will be sought by specious arguments that this or that stations is to have its service unduly cut Caldwell said

On such selfish appeals listeners in their own interest, are urged to withhold judgment and their participation for investigation will show that the allocation assignments, as made, are generally fair and equitable to all—and have been arranged solely so as to secure the fullest possible service to all listeners in each state and section

WASHINGTON SURPRISED

German Ship Crosses Coast Line at Cape Charles, Virginia

BULLETIN

The Graf Zeppelin was nearing New York City at 8:30 o'clock this afternoon and was expected to reach the metropolis within a short time After encircling the city the big ships with passengers and mail from Germany was to fly to the Lakehurst Naval Station and land

3:22 p m—Graf Zeppelin over Chester, Pa

3:34 p m—Over Philadelphia

3:40 p m—Over Camden, N J

Washington, Oct. 15—Poking its long nose out of an overcast sky as easy as its mooring other, the Graf Zeppelin paid a fleeting visit to Washington today enroute to Lakehurst from Germany.

The Zeppelin arrived over Washington at 12 20 o'clock

It will fly over Baltimore and Philadelphia before arriving at its destination about 4 o'clock

Crossing the American coast at 10:10 a m at Cape Charles, Va the monster dirigible with its crew of 40 and 20 passengers altered its course to swing over the nation's capital

Coolidge Greeted

As the ship headed over Chesapeake Bay and the Potomac river, Dr Hugo Eckener, commander, sent a radio message of greetings to President Coolidge He asked permission to fly over Washington Mr. Coolidge at once replied to Dr Eckener and ordered the permission granted

Washington was taken completely by surprise by the Zeppelin's visit

ZEPPELIN MAKES ENDURANCE MARK

New York Oct 15—When Graf Zeppelin, commercial Colossus of the airship, sighted American land at 10 30 a m today, the dirigible established a new transatlantic endurance flying record

Although the Zeppelin failed to break the speed record of crossing the Atlantic in 72 hours made by the dirigible Los Angeles four years ago, it established 101 hours in the air since it departed from Friedrichshafen at 2 a m Thursday

The British dirigible RA-1 crossed the Atlantic in 100 hours in 1919

All along it had been thought from the airships course that it would run to Lakehurst over a more direct inland route

Even before the Zeppelin arrived the news of its impending visit spread like wildfire in Washington It seemed that everybody in town had their necks craned to the sky to catch the first glimpse of the airliner Government departments poured out their employes by the thousands Business was temporarily paralyzed Traffic came to a virtual standstill, everybody shouted, and pointed to the Zeppelin as slowly it circled over the naval air station at Anacostia, over the capitol, and with mast and wireless flew over the White House, where president Coolidge waved a greeting

Forerunner of New Service

By its epochal flight, the Graf linked Europe and America together by commercial passenger and air line It is expected to be the forerunner of a regular transatlantic service

On the flight of more than 107 hours the dirigible battled much of the way against bad weather and adverse winds. A sudden rain squall ripped the cover off its port horizontal stabilizer This reduced the liner's speed The work of repairing the damage in mid air was an exceptional feat The Zeppelin flew far to the south of its course to run out of the poor weather conditions Aviation officials said the flight under such adverse circumstances proved the worthiness of the Zeppelin and its crew

Its motors droning steadily, the great, gray airship bore into view from the south and east It had followed the course of the Potomac river from the Virginia Capes

Despite the heavy weather, the nose of the Zeppelin shone like silver,

After swinging wide over the capital and the congressional library, the

HOME-MADE PLANE FALLS, KILLS TWO

Ship Strikes Smokestack at Dayton Plant; Owner Misjudges Distance

Dayton, Oct. 15—Casten A. Roepken, 26, garage man and amateur aviator, and H. D. Rice, 31, a passenger, are dead today, the result of a flight in a home-made airplane here yesterday which ended with the plane, said to have been powered with an obsolete motor, crashing into a smokestack at the Frigidaire plant here.

Roepken had built the machine in his shop and had piloted it recently against the advice of air field officials. Yesterday he invited Rice, a neighbor, to fly with him.

The plane took off from the ground in good shape, witnesses said, but when Roepken attempted to fly between two smokestacks he misjudged the distance, one wing striking a stack and crumpling, sending the plane crashing to the ground.

Both men were dead when removed from the wreckage.

NEARLY A DUPLICATE

Man and Wife Die Near Bridgeport In Tragedy Similar to Marion's

A tragedy almost a duplicate of the murder and suicide here yesterday occurred near Bridgeport Sunday, a report from there disclosed today.

Anton Gradwohl, 40, and his wife, Anna, 42, were dead there today as the outgrowth of an attempt at reconciliation on the part of Gradwohl after he learned his wife had filed suit for divorce, according to police.

Mary Gradwohl, 15-year-old daughter of the estranged couple, witnessed the domestic tragedy, narrowly escaping death when her father, after shooting and killing his wife, fired at her, the bullet grazing her cheek. Gradwohl then placed the pistol to his temple and pulled the trigger, dying instantly.

Gradwohl, who had been living in Wheeling, W. Va., and had been separated from his wife since last January, came to his wife's home at Roydsville, near Bridgeport, Sunday and pleaded with her to withdraw the divorce proceedings, Coroner J. W. Neal said. A quarrel ensued, climaxed by the shooting, when she refused to accede to his request.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond A. Gay, 493 Patterson st., are the parents of a daughter, born Sunday afternoon. The baby was named Mildred Caroline.

ZEP REACHES U. S. AFTER STORMY TRIP

Dirigible Passes Over Nation at Capital at 12:20 O'clock

Zeppelin made direct for the heart of the downtown business district. It circled just to the left of the International News Service building.

Through powerful glasses it was possible to distinguish human figures leaning out of the windows at the side of the ship. The passengers and crew waved frantically and just as enthusiastically as the crowds that jammed the streets and roof tops waved and cheered back.

The rip in the ship's port stabilizer was plainly visible. It was in jagged cuts as if the wind had torn it savagely.

On the prow, in red letters seemingly several feet high, were the words:

"Graf Zeppelin."

Back of this came the markings, "D-LZ127."

The motors roared like a dozen airplanes.

German Faith Undiminished

Berlin, Oct. 15—The stormy ride of the Graf Zeppelin, during which the ghostly claws of the Atlantic that had pulled down Nungesser, Coli and other daring souls were stretched forth for the 60 lives on board the dirigible, has left German faith in airships undiminished today.

The fact that the Graf rode out more than one storm and survived an accident was taken as conclusive proof of its air worthiness. German aeronautical experts insist that the dirigible is the passenger air liner of the future.

Capt. Walther Bruns, airship expert, was enthusiastic over the performance of the great ship. He told International News service:

Says Flight Achievement

"The flight was a great achievement and, by the time it is over will have covered 5,000 or 6,000 miles. No airplane could have done that. Delay or accident doesn't matter. Storms delay and damage ocean liners. Only recently the Albert Ballin arrived with 34 hurt."

Dr. Alfred Duerr, constructor of the Graf, declared there was no use worrying over the ship.

"This Zeppelin," said he, "has stood the most severe test and has proved that, even under the worst conditions it is perfectly safe. Therefore it is logical that it is as safe as a passenger ship. Steamers are sometimes late; sometimes are days overdue. The accident to the Graf still is a mystery to me but I can guarantee that it will never happen again."

Dr. Duerr said that, even if further repairs are necessary to the port stabilizer it should cause no anxiety. He said he did not believe that the repairs had anything to do with the speed of the ship. His opinion was that, if the speed were reduced, it was due to strong head winds.

Zeppelin Travels At 40-Mile Rate

Making slightly more than 40 miles an hour despite headwinds and a troublesome port fin, the German super-dirigible Graf Zeppelin, with 20 passengers, a crew of 40 and valuable mail aboard, was fighting her way northwest today towards Lakehurst, N. J., on her fifth day out from Friedrichshafen, Germany.

First indication that the Zeppelin was beginning to pick up speed after meandering about in the vicinity of Bermuda almost all day yesterday, was revealed in a message stating she was 150 miles west of Bermuda at 11:20 o'clock last night. The last previous message at 9:05 o'clock last night said she was 25 miles west of the island, so that in the three and a quarter hour interval, she had advanced more than 50 miles an hour.

The dirigible's fuel supply, according to expert estimates, is sufficient to keep her going until dawn tomorrow. Lives no fears are held on that score.

Although navy officials believe the precautionary measure unnecessary, three cruisers and a fleet of destroyers are being kept ready to speed to the dirigible's position at an hour's notice, if the port fin damaged Saturday should again cause trouble.

Everything is in readiness for the landing and housing of the huge craft at the naval air station at Lakehurst.

Weather Conditions Favor Landing

Naval Air Station, Lakehurst, N. J., Oct. 15—The transatlantic dirigible Graf Zeppelin wirelessed the Lakehurst naval station today that it expects to land at Lakehurst "at or before sunset."

The information contained in the message to the station here was also transmitted to the navy department in Washington.

The radio read:

"Plans indefinite but will probably land at or before sunset. Informed department."

Signed by Rosendahl

The message was signed by Charles E. Rosendahl, U. S. N., commander of the navy dirigible Los Angeles, who is the American representative board the ship.

The Graf Zeppelin had in an earlier message to the navy department at 8 a. m. given her position as 35.30 N., 74.04 west, or about 60 miles east of Cape Hatteras. She was then traveling 45 to 50 miles per hour.

Ground Crew Drilled

Weather conditions seemed likely to be favorable for the landing. All forenoon there was practically no wind and clear, sunshiny weather prevailed. The ground crew of 450 men had been thoroughly drilled and were in readiness to handle the Zeppelin at any hour, day or night.

The fact that a navy crew began tinkering with the dirigible Los Angeles, which is housed in the hangar here, gave rise to the recurrence of a rumor that the dirigible would be sent to meet the Graf Zeppelin as a gesture of friendship on the part of the United States. No confirmation of the rumor could be obtained at the hangar, however.

Warner declared that if the Graf Zeppelin does not reach Lakehurst before 3 o'clock she will not circle New York City as had been planned because she contemplates a daylight landing. If, however, she makes fast time during the remainder of the distance from Cape Charles she may shoot up to New York and then circle back to this field. He expressed the opinion that the dirigible could remain aloft another day if she desired because she had enough fuel to travel five days at high speed. She has not been going at full speed, he added, and no doubt will reach here with plenty of fuel on hand.

Several thousand persons were on the field near the hangar at 11 o'clock and the number was being constantly augmented. News of the approach of the Zeppelin spread like wildfire and automobiles began to wend their way up the highways in droves. The New Jersey state police and special marine officers were out in force to maintain order.

An air of tenseness began to pervade the hangar where listlessness had prevailed for hours.

EDGWOOD SHINGLES
Right Over the Old Roof

SAVE labor and expense of removing the old shingles, eliminate unsightly litter, possible damage to shrubs and plants, and provide protection in the event of sudden storms during construction.

EDGWOOD Shingles are cut edge-grain and positively will not warp, cup or curl—they force the old shingles tight to the sheathing and lie tight and flat for fifty years and more.

Applying EDGWOOD Shingles in this manner is not new, as it has long been practised in cold climates to apply Red Cedar Shingles over tight sheathing and building paper. It is a fallacy to assume that EDGWOOD Shingles will decay if laid over old shingles — rot-promoting fungi can find no weakness in British Columbia Red Cedar, as Nature has endowed this wood with preservative oils.

EDGWOOD Shingles are cut edge-grain and permit a 5" exposure to the weather for 16" shingles, and 5½" for 18" shingles. They have greater covering capacity, consequently cost no more than the ordinary flat grain shingle. In fact, they cost a whole lot less, when you realize that you have a fifty-year roof free from trouble.

"EDGWOOD HOMES" is an interesting and informative illustrated booklet. We'd gladly send it free on receipt of name and address.

TRAFFIC VIOLATION RECORD RUNS HIGH

One Out of Five City Motorists Face Charges, Says Report Filed Here

An average of one out of five motorists in the metropolitan areas is charged with violations of the traffic laws each year.

This statement was made by Mrs. D. A. Gallagher, secretary of the Marion Auto club today. It is based upon a report received from national headquarters of the American Motorists association covering reports to a quota in nearly 200 cities and towns in population from 50,000 to over 600,000.

The number of persons charged with violations of the traffic laws in 18 metropolitan centers in 1927 was 611,432 as compared to 77,010 10 years ago. While car registration in these cities increased only 40 per cent in the same period there was a

TRIANGLE TIRES
MALO BROS.

...ing of three per cent in charges of traffic violations.

Other cities mentioned by Mrs. Gallagher are Cleveland, Minneapolis, Memphis, Miami, Denver, Colo., showed a per cent of increase in car registration against a 24 per cent increase in traffic violations. Miami showed the greatest increase in violations of the traffic laws with a total of 97 per cent in the 10 years, while car registration increased only 40 per cent.

Los Angeles, Cal., showed the greatest increase in car registration with 140 per cent with violations and all 102 per cent.

In spite of the report from this survey, says Mrs. Gallagher, that the multiplicity of traffic laws and regulations is responsible in a measure for the increase in violations in the past few years, not more than the increase in number of motor vehicles. It shows, instead, that the need for uniformity in the basic rules for governing traffic in cities that the car owner can be free from the annoyance of arrest which in many instances is based upon unavoidable violation of the different regulations in many cities.

The auto club secretary pointed out that the uniform municipal traffic ordinance recently prepared by 11 national associations concerned with traffic and safety, is specifically designed to remedy such a condition.

RURAL STRAW VOTE GIVES HOOVER LEAD

Strength Shown in Marion County Section Normally Democratic

Marion county's rural district, which is usually counted upon to go Democratic, will give Hoover a majority in the November election this year, if the straw vote recently taken by the Columbus Dispatch is to be taken as a reliable indication.

A rural vote taken by mail in the county brought returns giving Hoover 156 and Smith 84. The Lands allowed that 84 men and 72 women voted for Hoover and 12 men and 42 women for Smith.

Ballots mailed in from the same rural district gave Davey a lead of six over Cooper in the gubernatorial race. The totals were Cooper 111, Davey 120. The Cooper vote included 60 men and 51 women and the Davey vote 6 men and 57 women.

Previous straw vote totals reported by the Dispatch from the city of Marion were: Hoover 110, Smith 131, Cooper 245, Davey 111.

The grand total for the county including both city and rural district, stands as follows: Hoover 304, Smith 215, Cooper 350, Davey 201.

Behind the Scenes In Hollywood

BY DOROTHY HERZOG
Marion Star Staff Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD—While boating in picturesque country devoid of modern conveniences has its hardships it also has its fascinations.

The Richard Dix Beldam troupe spent a fortnight in the northern part of Arizona. There they were also treated to one of the most sacred ceremonies of the Navajos. This tribe is reported to be more jealous of its tribal rites than any Indians in the southwest.

The ceremony witnessed and photographed was that of the 'yebechi' or dry sand painting. The sand painting was done by the Chee Dodge medicine man and his council on a flat expanse of ground in front of a mud hogan or Navajo hut, near Chin Lees trading post on the Navajo reservation.

Two days were required to shoot the rite to the Navajos refused to leave the intricate and tediously fashioned creation on the ground after once was. The sand painting has a religious significance. It is made from powdered rocks of various colors on a bed of natural gray sand approximately eight by six feet in size. By carefully blending the different color of rocks the Medicine Man secure a variety of shades of the dry powder. The painting consists of four figures of a theme akin to the totems of the Alaskan tribes.

The first figure is traced with white rock powder. The second is a brilliant yellow. The third a blue-grey and the fourth a solid black. They are then elaborately decorated with minute lines circles and figures of geometric pattern. The whole when completed resembles an intricate Navajo rug.

Chee Dodge chief of the Cheelan Navajos revealed to Director Victor Schertzinger that this was the first time his tribe had ever permitted a camera to photograph the sacred yebechi ceremony. Elizabeth Pickett secured this right. She lived among the Navajos and Pueblo tribes of central New Mexico for three years gathering material which in large measure went into 'Medicine Man.' The Indian today, evidently is the same as he was centuries ago. Once he gives his friendship you can get any amount of cooperation from him—within reason.

Washington reports that, owing to increased receipts and marked savings effected by the various government bureaus, the threatened deficit will not develop; that the budget will be balanced before next June. What a pity that states and municipalities can not be made to emulate the economy practiced by the federal government.

Just why agreements should be broken, as was the case in the unauthorized strike of American Railway Express company employes in New York City last week, and the people of a great city inconvenienced owing to a disagreement between two brotherhoods, is another of those mysteries beyond all human understanding.

What Are the City's Rights?

Ever since announcement was made that the Columbus, Delaware and Marion Electric company planned the abandonment of street car service in this city and would not seek a renewal of its franchise, there has been general speculation regarding what was to be done with the trackage abandoned by the company.

The fact that the Electric company is at present engaged in removing its overhead system on the streets it no longer uses indicates very plainly that it doesn't propose to do anything. If the company contemplated the removal of the rails and ties on east Fairground, east Center and south Main streets and Delaware avenue, it would hardly take down the overhead system by which to furnish power for the hauling away of its rails and ties.

In the manifest intention of the company to take no action in this regard, interest naturally centers in what the city council proposes to do.

Council has been criticized, very unjustly it may be said, for not forcing the removal of the trackage abandoned on the thoroughfares mentioned by holding the use of the lines over which the company operates its interurban cars as a club. That plan might have availed years ago before the municipalities of Ohio surrendered the right of the control of the use of their streets to the state. As it is, the company needs no franchise to operate its interurban cars. The state utilities commission will protect it in the use of our streets.

Again, it has been urged that the city might compel the removal of the trackage abandoned by the Electric company by following the plan utilized to accomplish the removal of the abandoned trackage on Silver street.

That case and the present are not parallel. In the Silver street case, service was suspended while the franchise was yet in life. Council notified the company which had been operating the line to resume its service and gave notice that, in the event of the company's failure to resume service by a time stipulated by council, its franchise would be declared forfeited and its trackage removed at its expense. Service was not resumed, and council proceeded to have the track torn up, but before the job of removal was fairly under way the operating company—on the advice of council—asked to be permitted to take over the job and went ahead with the work.

But we believe there is a way in which the Columbus, Delaware and Marion company can be compelled to remove the tracks abandoned by it and restore the streets to good condition. We are led to this belief by a decision of the Ohio supreme court, in which many years ago it was held, reported in Volume 100, Ohio State Reports, page one to eighty, inclusive, in the matter of the City of Mt. Vernon against Bowman & Reed. Admittedly, these cases are not parallel, for in the Mt. Vernon case Bowman & Reed, the purchasers of the paving and trackage at a receiver's sale, sought to remove the trackage without removing the paved streets, but in rendering its decision in that matter, the court made plain a course by which the city *of Marion can proceed to compel the Colum*bus, Delaware and Marion Electric company to remove its abandoned tracks in this city and that is by establishing the fact, which is easy of establishment, that, by permitting its abandoned tracks to remain in the streets, it is committing a nuisance. The Columbus, Delaware and Marion Electric company was given the right to operate cars over certain streets of the city. So long as it operated its cars at the intervals specified, it had the use of the streets, but when it abandoned the operation of cars it forfeited the use of the streets in question as storage places for its trackage.

The syllabus of the Mt. Vernon case in part reads:

"1. The paramount purpose for which the streets of a municipality are dedicated and opened is to facilitate travel and transportation. They are held in trust for the benefit of the public and are required to be kept open and free from nuisance.

"2. Rights in streets or highways granted to public service corporations are at all times held in subordination to the superior public rights."

The finding was reported by Justice James G. Johnson, Chief Justice Hugh L. Nichols and Justices Edward S. Matthias, R. M. Wanamaker and James E. Robinson concurring.

The finding of the supreme court is far too long to be given in full, but we give the following excerpts from it which we believe have bearing on the local case:

"We think there is general concurrence in the view that when a franchise has expired, or has been revoked, the grantee corporation, in the absence of provisions in the contract to the contrary, may be compelled to remove its structures, and, on the other hand, if it desires to remove them, can not be prevented from doing so. 19 Ruling Case Law, 1161, Section 436; Leighton v. City of Carthage, 175 Fed. Rep., 146; Cleveland Electric Ry. Co. v. Cleveland et al., 201 U. S., 116; and Detroit United Railway v. City of Detroit, 229 U. S., 39.

"But the question still remains whether the company, or its successor in title, as to so much of the property as is located in the public streets of a city, is required, after it has exercised its right of removal, to restore the street to the condition in which the city has placed it, suitable for the purposes of a public thoroughfare." * * *

"It is insisted that as the franchise contains no specific provision requiring the company to restore the streets after removing its property, it can not be required to do so. The streets and public places of a municipality are held in trust for the benefit of the public. They are required to be kept open and free from nuisance. Unless vacated or abandoned in compliance with the method provided by law, a city has no right to contract away public streets, or to render them unfit for passage or dangerous to the public. An individual may abandon his private property, but a public trustee can not abandon public property."

In this connection Justice Nichols cited the matter of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad company against the City of Cincinnati, 76 Ohio State, 481, and the matter of the Railway Company against Telegraph Association, 48 Ohio State, 350, and then continued:

"In the L. S. & M. Ry. Co. v. The City of Elyria, 69 Ohio St., 415, the court decided that the city was not authorized to agree to the exclusive occupation of the street and that the company could be compelled to restore the street to its former condition without compensation. So here, when a franchise contract has been violated and all rights under it forfeited and terminated, the grantee should be required to restore the public street to the condition in which it found it or in which it had been legally put.

"The statutory provisions prohibiting the creation of nuisances in the public streets and thoroughfares are familiar."

Fear has been expressed that the city of Marion, by ordering the removal of a short stretch of trackage for the protection of water and gas pipes from electrolysis, has forfeited any rights it may have had against the Columbus, Delaware and Marion Electric company looking to the removal of the abandoned tracks, but council's action was one of protection only and was and is justified by law. In this connection we quote from the finding delivered by Justice Johnson the following paragraph:

"It is said in Elliott on Municipal Corporations (1 ed.), Section 102: 'Neither the acquiescence of a city in an obstruction or private use of a street by a citizen, nor laches in restoring to legal remedies, nor the statute of limitations, nor equitable estoppel, nor prescription can defeat the right to maintain a suit in equity to remove the obstructions.'"

What action council may have in mind, or what course it may decide to pursue, is beyond our knowledge, but it should not permit the abandoned tracks to remain not only the nuisance, but also the menace to the public that they are. In the light of the excerpts quoted, we believe the city has the power to compel the Electric company to remove the tracks and abate the nuisance and menace they constitute by restoring those portions of the streets formerly used by it to good condition.

THE BURIAL.

Baby Learning To Chew.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

One of the first lessons to teach a child is the importance of chewing the food. We must begin with this teaching just as soon as the youngster is old enough to take "chewable" food. Usually at the age of one year the baby is strong enough to chew on a crust of buttered bread, or on a chicken bone. Pretty soon it will be taking small quantities of meat and plenty of vegetables. Let it be understood that these must be thoroughly chewed.

Bolting the food is bad for young and old. It is too much the habit of many Americans, old as well as young. In a sense we are a nation of dyspeptics. This is a state of affairs founded on hasty eating and failure to prepare the food for digestion.

Of course, such foods as I have in mind must be prepared for the child under twelve months of age. It requires the aid of the mother. The meats, if they are given, should be scraped, or else cut into very fine pieces.

At this tender age, too, the vegetables should be well cooked and then strained through a sieve, rubbed through it, I should say. It isn't a bad idea to strain the cereals, so to get rid of fibre and chaff. But when the first birthday has arrived, the normal child will begin to use his jaws for chewing purposes. The gums and teeth, as well as the chewing muscles, will be aided in their development by this practice. From this time on there should be a variety in the foods given at each meal. It is unwise, and improper indeed, to permit the child to make an entire meal of one single food. The given food may be desirable from every standpoint, but, even so, that should not lead you to disregard the importance of variety.

You see, every food possesses certain chemical and physical qualities. But your child can not grow and develop normally unless all the required elements get into his system. By feeding a variety of things the youngster will wax strong and sturdy.

Careful training from these early days of the young life will cause the formation of good habits. These habits will last all through its career. Many a healthy man or woman of today can look back in gratitude to a mother who insisted on proper habits of eating.

A healthy and correctly fed child will go to the table with an appetite. It goes to the table to eat. You should not permit it to play with the food. Let it be understood that during that period eating is the main and practically the only business.

But, be careful! Do not permit hasty eating or the bolting of the food, which I have already told you is to be had for this young citizen.

I beg of you to take the greatest of pains to drill into this young mind the importance of good table manners and the proper manner of eating the proper foods.

Editorial Comment.

CHINA'S GREATEST MILITARY GENIUS.

With the civil war over in at least its more important phases, General Chiang Kai-Shek becomes president of the Chinese republic, of which he has virtually been the head for some months, and can show the world whether he is as adequate to the problems of peace as to those of war.

As probably China's greatest military genius of modern times, he has drawn much attention to himself in recent months. What other leader of armies in late years in any country has done what he has done? His great feat has been won in short space of time since July, 1926. A secretary, a cabinet minister and an adviser on military affairs to the Americanized Dr. Sun Yat Sen, he took up the Nationalistic cause in that month, when it was merely one of a chaos of factional causes and counseled to Canton in the far south, with a limited amount of surrounding territory. Hampered by lack of money and arms and by quarreling in his own ranks, with retreats as well as advances, he subdued a huge area to Nationalism as far as the great river. After retiring for a time, he organized his movement with a momentum that slowly spread over province after province until the ancient capital was in his hands.

It must not be supposed that he maneuvered any meager forces within a narrow territory. Aside from those of the Great war, probably the combined armies under his command were as large as any ever gathered in the Occident, and opposed in a great area of Asia an enemy as formidable as any, under successive factional war lords, separately and combined. He captured more cities than did Alexander, and, of course, more than did Caesar.

A wise head will be required to stabilize China and guide it in unity and modernism and peace. Something resembling that kind of head seems to be found on the Chiang Kai-Shek shoulders.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

SMOKED OUT.

The Anglo-French naval pact, held secret until its terms were somehow learned by an enterprising American newspaper reporter, will presently be published by the British government. The policy of dealing behind closed doors savored so much of the damaging diplomacy of the pre-war period that it brought down on the head of the British government too much adverse criticism to be borne. The government's position just now is none too secure on several other issues.

President Coolidge sharply criticized the secret aspect of the pact in a communication rejecting an invitation to make this government a party to it. Nettled a bit because his own plans for further reducing armaments went awry, perhaps, he made it entirely clear to England and France that this country disapproved of their secret approach to the problem at this time.

With England making public the terms of the agreement, the way may now be paved for some form of American participation. The agreement presumably looks in the direction which this country wishes to go in naval defenses, but there is of course no assurance that England would any more recognize this country's demands for naval equality at this time than she would a year ago.

In any case it is fortunate that England and France have been smoked out by the force of public opinion at home and are preparing to make the terms of their agreement public. It will be of interest and probably of significance in connection with the naval policy this nation should pursue.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Animal Psychology.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

The Dutch psychologist, Dr. F. Buytendijk, has taken up the challenge of the materialists in a book on the "Psychology of Animals," just translated into French. In considering the nature and meaning of animal behavior he places himself at the opposite pole to that occupied by Jacques Loeb, the great protagonist of the doctrine of "tropism," which is to say, in substance, that animals are governed in their apparently voluntary actions solely by the influence of external excitation, physical or chemical. Loeb assembled many curious instances of the attraction of light, heat, nutritive influences, etc., upon living creatures, which would lead to the conclusion that their movements are as involuntary as those of a stone falling to the earth by gravitational attraction.

Buytendijk goes to the contrary extreme, and finds a psychological element even in the movements of unicellular animals. He offers a definition which excludes the tropism theory in the following words:

"That which defines an action, animal or human, is the aim toward which it tends, and not merely the movements into which it may be decomposed."

In his opinion, based upon long years of study of animal behavior in the Institute of Animal Psychology which he has established in Amsterdam, there is no precise boundary between man and the other animals, but there is to be found in all the animal world an "immaterial finality," inconsistent with mechanistic theories, but indicating a controlling idea in nature.

"The psychology of animals shows," says he, "that living nature reposes upon ideas possessing a fitting, logical unity, outside of and above individuals, and in our personal consideration of life we should seek this unity in a world soul, or in the existence of a God."

To this a mechanistic critic sarcastically responds: "So we assist at the renaissance of *the idea of God in a book of a scientific al*lure!"

But is science, then, so inimical in its nature to the "idea of God" that no work based on scientific observation must even hint at the existence of a Creator. I do not believe that the majority of men of science *would subscribe to any such motion. Dr. Buy*tendijk's observations lead him to conclude that neither mechanics nor chemistry can explain the activities of animal life. Upon reflection he can find no solution except that there is a controlling intelligence governing a great plan for existence of which the phenomena of vital action and psychology form a part. If this is not a scientific idea, at least it interferes with no legitimate aim of science, and considered as a hypothesis is not a whit more illogical than some of the theories that are offered on the other side. It will be a sad day for humanity when everything is excluded from consideration that can not be demonstrated in a laboratory. "Then dies the man in you." — Copyright, 1928, International Feature Service, Inc.

Not the Head of Church.

Editor Star—A news item in the Star of October 12, in mentioning the death of Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson, of New York, spoke of her as the "head of the Christian Science church, who assumed the leadership left vacant by the death of Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy." Kindly allow me space to correct this erroneous statement. Although Mrs. Stetson at one time was active in the Christian Science church, she ceased to be a member in 1909, previous to Mrs. Eddy's passing on.

In this connection it should be stated that through her writings, Mrs. Eddy continues to be regarded by Christian Scientists as their leader. On February 27, 1903, she wrote to the Christian Science board of directors: "If I am not personally with you, the Word of God and my instructions in the by-laws have led you hitherto and will remain to guide you safely on....."

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, Oct. 15 — Diary of a modern Pepys: Up and came a delayed greeting from Homer Croy in Lima, Peru, that he has been investigating the Lima bean situation, and although the natives never heard of it, seemed happy withal. Also a letter from Billy De Beck, the Romeo, who has taken in love with Paris and will winter in St. Jean d'Luz.

So at lunch time I took and later to dine with a friend to Prospect park in Brooklyn, and there afoot for a pleasant walk, it being my favorite park in all the city. Home came Archie Andrews and Ted Doremus and much rag, tag and bobtail.

In the evening to dinner with Charles B. Driscoll, the gazetteer, at a Greek restaurant on Fourteenth street and we prowled about Greenwich village finding a short, narrow thoroughfare called Gay street, as peaceful as ever we saw. Then to bed.

The roof bungalow craze flourishes. Atop of every new sky-scraper has a house with spreading lawn, arbors, little streams with foot bridges high up in the clouds. The fashionable penthouse has become the most exclusive of all ways of living in the metropolis. It has its private elevator and is away from prying eyes of neighbors. A few of them it is whispered have become cozy hide-aways for crepe de chine ladies who are linked in the tabloids with those heartless Wall Street men.

Tattoo removers are not confined entirely to streets haunted by seamen along water fronts. There is now one on Forty-Second street. The charge for removal is five dollars a square inch.

Tattooing is found on people one supposes to resort to this particular vanity. At a bathing beach recently a college professor with a superior class-room manner exposed an arm with a bleeding heart tattooed thereon. It was a relict of a runaway sea trip in early youth.

Youth is getting on in the book publishing business. Four new and highly successful publishers are under thirty-five.

It has been observed that great publishing houses reach a stage of dry rot. Until late years few readers in publishing houses, who passed upon the merits of books, were under sixty. Then the business was infused with the enthusiasm of youth and more books are sold now than ever. Six books a year used to be an average for publishers. One firm this year published 412.

Enthusiasm. Incidentally, receives this trade last from a highly successful New Yorker: "Give me eighty per cent. enthusiasm and twenty per cent. ability and I'll make any business you name pay high dividends."

A New York jeweler is displaying a diamond-studded hand bag designed for a beautiful chorus lady whose boy friend doesn't care what he does with papa's money. It cost him $26,000. Before pricing it I had thought of ordering one for my wife and have been blushing for three days straight.

And the same jeweler has a pearl necklace which has been sold for $685,000. The largest pearl is valued at $135,000. The purchaser is a one-gallused Middle West fellow on the right side of a motor stock rise. The story goes his wife tried to persuade him to keep out of Wall street and to placate her he promised if he won she could select any necklace she might choose. The $685,000 necklace was her choice. The income represented by such an investment is $2,600 a week, which seems to some of us an awful price for upkeep of something so easily duplicated in paste only experts can distinguish.

"I am retiring from active work," announces a New York merchant, "to go to the south of France and write."

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

If we haven't read a book or two on evolution, it is better not to express an opinion on evolution. If we are short on information procured by the direct method, better stay in the listening class. If we haven't time to read we are leading a badly-disordered life. A man or woman who finds no time to read in all the twenty-four hours of the day is hardly finding life worth living. And his system of management is terrible.

A series of articles has been seen in the newspapers recently under the title: "What's the Matter With Marriage?"

Perhaps the answer is, "Nothing." The matter is with some people. It might be said, more seriously, that what is often called the matter with marriage is really a problem of training, of discipline, of racial inheritance. Marriage is an idea and an ideal. It is an idea and an ideal worth trying to realize.

There is an unwieldiness and an unworkableness in large bodies. The president's cabinet should not be much larger. The fact is, nevertheless, that the importance of the enormous educational projects in this country is such that the matter of a department of education ought to receive the most earnest consideration. If the department of the navy and of war could be united, as has been wisely suggested, a secretary of education could take his place in the cabinet without increasing the total number.

Most pleas of "I'm too busy" are simply alibis for not doing what one does not want to do. Wouldn't we be happier all around if we adopted the custom of saying: "I do not want to do this thing because I do not believe in it," or "I do not care to," or "I am too lazy" rather than say what we really do not mean?

Have you ever noticed that few of us are ever too busy to do what we really want to do?

Do you remember that old proverb which says: "There is nothing which makes a man suspect more than to know little?" The passing of gossip, the bandying about of baseless rumor, is like sifting cyanide into the air. It is like dealing carelessly in prussic poison. It kills reputation, it destroys character, it works the most tragic injustice on the innocent.

Might Help a Bit.

The Smith special cut across southern Illinois today, bound for St Louis where the principal stop of the day was scheduled

Illinois is one of those states which the Democrats have been looking at with cute ones ere notwithstanding the traditional Republicanism this is almost synonymous with the pa e Not in a generation has Illinois cast her 29 electoral votes for a Democrat for president save in 1912 the year of the Republican split

Nevertheless Governor Smith and his advisers are exceedingly hopeful this year their hopes are predicated upon the agricultural discontent in the Republican districts downstate and the enormous wet vote in Chicago They are counting too on the influence ha Frank O Lowden a defeat at Kansas City will have for Lowden was and is a very popular man in Illinois particularly downstate where Republican machines are the accepted thing While Lowden has done nothing, at least openly to hurt the Hoover candidacy he has done little to advance it

The Democratic nominee will reach Sedalia Mo tonight The selection of Sedalia as the speaking point in Missouri was due to the M souri leaders They have told Governor Smith that normally Republican St Louis is his anyway but that rural Missouri where Pe religious and prohibition issues are keen is fighting territory Accordingly they preferred him to speak in Sedalia in the west

Beauty and the Million

DRAMATIC STORY OF AMAZING ADVENTURE

BY WILLIAM ALMON WOLFF

CHAPTER THIRTY ONE

A HELL, futile anger held Jim in its grip for a long time. He raged against Blake for having gone too far. There is a thing as the law, even aboard a yacht. And this was the twentieth century, not the seventeenth. He had passed when a rich man could have a rival or one who got in his path in any way liquidated or eliminated.

But he didn't feel at all. He had no sense of any real and pressing danger. In his heart he had always liked Blake. The man had proved a bully more than once and a firmly fixed belief in Jim's mind was that at heart, at bottom, he was a coward.

He might be indeed was quite certain that he was a coward to a degree of self-abasement but of a cold, complete crime like murder—Jim scornfully believed him incapable.

No. He was in no real danger. Blake overcome by jealousy, had devised this childish trick to get rid of him for a space. He could never stand his motive even to himself, he could almost sympathize with it. The whole affair, indeed was to be considered for him a dismissal of it by letting it escape him.

His struggles once he was in the boat, lasted only a moment. He must of course escape. It was unthinkable that Blake should be allowed to get away with this to have Jim carried off and order his release when his pleasure decreed. No. He must elude his guardian his kidnappers, as soon as he could he must return and confound Blake by his sudden and unexpected reappearance at the earliest possible moment.

And to accomplish that he had to keep his wits about him. He must waste no effort in futile, child-ish struggling, that was very clear.

For the moment, certainly he was completely out of action. He was absolutely helpless. He was gagged so that he could not cry out. He was bound hand and foot. He was blinded by the bag that had been thrown over his head—he assumed it was a bag—it felt rough, like a burlap sack or something of the sort.

Except for the gag, he was not, as a matter of fact, particularly uncomfortable. He could breathe and while the bag made it stuffy he was in no danger of suffocation. Nor had he except for the one kick that had stopped his useless struggling, been actually maltreated.

He was prepared to believe that his captors had handled him as gently as the circumstances permitted—though that in no way tempered his resolution to punish them.

He was, he judged lying in the bottom of an open boat—and not a large one. It was a rowboat, probably, he thought of the sort that is always to be found about such a place as Delmara. It might belong to Delmar, it might on the other hand, be one of Blake's yacht. In any case it was too much to take for granted that they were far away, and he drew some comfort from that thought.

He had, at first, been afraid that he might be taken to Blake's yacht. But the chances of that it seemed to him as he pieced his mind to his plight, were fairly remote. The yacht, if its appearance meant anything, carried a good sized crew, and Blake probably would not feel like risking a number of men into his confidence—but so serious a matter as a kidnaping. So it could almost eliminate the danger of being carried along that way off on the yacht.

The whole proceeding though angered him as he lay still listening to the slow creaking of the oars in their locks, and the gentle lapping of the water against the boat's sides. It was so futile so silly, so childish a thing that Blake had done! What possible benefit could he hope to derive from such an indulgence of his jealousy and anger.

He couldn't, obviously expect to eliminate Jim permanently in any such fashion as this. The most he could accomplish would be to cause Jim some annoyance, some discomfort. And the chances he was taking seemed fantastically out of proportion to what he could reasonably expect to gain.

Unless of course he knew the truth would be furious. Her hospitality had been outraged! Jim knew her well enough, he thought not to be in any sort of doubt as to the way she would punish Blake for such a performance. And—she would be as angry as disgusted by its silliness as by anything else. A crime in the grand manner provoked by passionate love of her, even or any other woman might excuse, extenuate. But never a stupid meaningless bad-ness like this.

Yet it was all very well to be de-spising Blake. The fact remained that here he, the innocent was and here, so far as any present hope of escape went he seemed likely to stay at Ralph Blake's pleasure. Jim was reminded, with a wry smile of the story of the man in prison, to whom his lawyer comes saying, indignantly:

But they can't put you in jail for that! To which the prisoner answered: I know they can't, but I am in jail!'

So far as he could gather now only one man was in the boat with him—he who was steadily pulling her along. At least of the two had more oc-cupants than the oarsman himself they were amazingly silent—not a word had been spoken since he had been peremptorily ordered to keep still. He hoped he was right, he had an idea that if he were free, he would be more than a match for any single guardian. He knew how to take care of himself in a fight, and his knowledge was not that of the skilled boxer only—he had fought, in his time, with men who obeyed no rules and sought only to put their adversaries out of action.

His mind darted ahead, past the time of this imprisonment. Blake when he returned would be thought deny any knowledge of his kidnaping. Could he prove anything? He had of course heard Blake's voice at the moment of his seizure—there was no doubt whatever, in his own mind, of Blake's complicity, indeed of his direct and complete responsibility. But Blake almost certainly would make a flat denial and stand upon it, it would be his word against Jim's. Jim grinned sourly, to himself. Blake's crowd would believe him, of course, his friends would take his word.

But it didn't matter. He had no desire in any case, to turn the last of punishing Blake over to the law. The issue between them was a personal one. In a way he welcomed this open act of war, the lines would be down between them from now on and he would be free to deal with Blake as best he could.

Blake had begun this sort of warfare, it was for him Jim Renshaw, to see to it that before the account was finally closed Blake had taken as many blows as he had given that he had, indeed, had more than he had bargained for or wanted.

Suddenly he felt a little shock, a shiver ran through the boat. He knew what it meant, she had touched bottom. The oars stopped creaking.

they were shipped, he heard the squish of water as the man who had been rowing stepped overboard. Then the boat was being dragged out of the water, onto a beach he could hear pebbles grating against her keel. The first stage, at least, of this mysterious journey was at an end.

He was left for some time in the bottom of the boat. He could hear the man who had brought him moving about singing now and again snatches of popular songs. Then, through the sacking that covered his eyes he was aware of a light and he could hear the cheerful crackling of a fire. Soon the odor of frying bacon and the aroma of coffee came to him—rather faintly for, to his surprise he discovered that he was hungry.

Hey, bud! How'd you like to be reasonable—huh?'

'Very much,' he tried to say, but the gag still silenced him. Then he was lifted out of the boat, the sack was removed and cautiously a moment later the gag. He had so his first chance to observe his companion and jailer. He saw a big, powerful man, in blue jersey and corduroys trousers tucked down into rubber boots. A mask covered the upper part of his face. The precaution amused him.

'Goin' to be nice you?' this man said.

'Looks as if I'm have to be!' said Jim.

You said it! Way I feel—let's be comfortable you and me both. I got to keep you tied but I dont aim to hurt you none. And I've got this, if you get coy.

Significantly he took a heavy automatic pistol from his pocket and laid it down beside him where the firelight danced upon its nickeled barrel.

'Keep your mind on that and you and me'll get along fine!' he said, grimly.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

YESTERDAY was Sunday, and if Frenchy had of been me when I had let Jubilee down by the rope in his teeth and milked the cows and strained the milk and fed my face and been washed by my ant for Sunday school he would have smelt like a night blooming cereus from the soap she rubbed into me.

It was quite a coldish day, and I told my ant that I don't think it is a good think to scrub all of the dirt out of a fellow's pores and send him out in the cold with them wide open because I might get peonia or something. She said that any peonia germ that bit me would get worse than the peonia so I sqinched up my face and took it and didn't say any more. There isn't much a fellow can say to a full grown ant. So I took the two pancakes that had been in my pocket all the time she was washing me out to Jubilee and the whole bunch of us except Feeble, who had not come, got in behind the cows and made them stroll everything but their milk getting out to the pasture ahead of us.

Then we went around to get Feeble and go to Sunday school and the house was full of people and all my people were there and everybody and as soon as we got there Feeble's mother asked me where Feeble was and scared me and shook me, and I told her I didn't know. And then Mr. Wagmore and another man came in Mr. Wagmore's car, and we found out what had happened. Feeble's mother had went in to call her and her clothes were there, and her mother thought she was in the bath room and went and finished getting breakfast and that was all there was to it. Feeble's window was open and Feeble never did show up. We looked everywhere all day, and I was let out up late.

Today was Monday, and a school day but there wasn't any school. We all looked everywhere, and there was no one only Younies to go for the cows with me just when it was getting dark and then when we were going past old man Scanlon's house he was leaning on the gate smoking and asked us where the other little girl had went. I asted him if he meant Feeble, and he said he didn't know half our names, but he said she was always with us. He said he was out for an early morning walk on the Hogback and an auto went past him and a little girl popped half out of it and waved her hand at him and popped back, and he knew it was her, so I where was she going? I told him I didn't know, and then we hiked out and forget the cows.

The haunted house is on the Hog back, or off of it quite a ways, and it was getting dark, and we got there and went through it like a cyclone, and then we unbolted the cellar door and went down and made a light, and there was Feeble. She was tied with rope around her hands and feet and a rag around her mouth. And then we heard someone come in upstairs.

We all love fat people, don't we? They laugh so generously at our jokes that the jokes seem twice as good.

Arrival of Samuel Pelatowa Early Threatens Marmola Plans

I WATCHED Helen anxiously as she opened the yellow envelope which I was sure contained the news of telegraphic transfer from Samuel Pelatowa. But to my great relief there was no trace in her face or manner of the nervousness, amounting almost to hysteria with which she had received the first message sent her by the former business associate of Marmola's father. She was distinctly herself again, poised as she passed the message to me after reading it.

Helen's running, time to time, she commented with a wry little smile. He always was tenderly reckless about telegraph and telephone bills. Just read this sent at regular day rates no night or day letter here.

Will be in your vicinity about the eighteenth, it read. Helen and I are delighted to accept your and Miss Graham's kind invitation the talk with five in our party, feel it will be in position. We can stay but one night however as we must be at Caroline's school. Love the twenty second. Helen sends her fondest love.

SAMUEL PELATOWA.

If he were only paid by the word instead of being charged for it, he'd soon amass a fortune. I commented inanely. But my mind was racing forward to this domestic problem to be solved in the entertainment of five guests no one of whom I had ever seen before. I had made light of it when Lillian had protested my invitation but I had a very lively sense of the difficulties before me, nevertheless.

'Exactly,' Lillian said. 'May I look at that thing again. When did he say they were coming? Here buried the date under such a mass of verbiage that I'm not sure it's there.'

'It's the eighteenth.' I said.

'The eighteenth.' Lillian agreed reading the verbose message again, then she looked quickly up at me.

'But we have to start for Marion's school early on the twentieth,' she said. The opening day for Benton is the twenty first. They have to be on hand to greet the new girls who arrive the twenty second. We are planning to motor down leisurely on the twentieth, and stay all night at a charming country hotel near the school, so that Marion will be fresh and rested for the morning of the twenty first. If they come the eighteenth leave the nineteenth and we start the morning of the twentieth I can see where you'd spend the rest of the week—in the nearest sanitarium.'

'You must think very little of my housekeepers. I scoffed. For my part I'm glad he isn't coming until the last minute. It will give you and Marion a chance to take that little trip you were planning before Harry came home.'

Into her eyes flashed a look of delight quickly shadowed by doubt.

'I'm not used enough to driving, as to that car,' she said.

'It's time you got used to it,' I returned. 'It's the only blot on an otherwise perfect ensemble, your dislike of driving.'

'Your idea of a perfect day may be driving through New York traffic in a thunder storm,' she said dryly, referring to a memorable experience of mine. 'But it isn't mine.'

'Who's mentioning New York traffic?' I asked hotly.

She looked at me sharply then laughed.

'I distinctly you have some scheme for me,' she said, which cuts out New York entirely. All right, go ahead and outline it. I'm in a most tractable mood.'

BUCKEYES SHOULD BEAT WOLVERINES

THOSE thousands of fans who Saturday afternoon will jam Ohio stadium at Columbus for the State-Michigan game may be sadly disappointed if they anticipate a classic in the way of football battles.

They will probably see an Ohio State victory, the fourth since the two schools started relations on the gridiron in 1897. Since that time the Wolverines have won 19 and tied two games with the Buckeyes.

After being defeated by the remaining Bishops of Ohio Wesleyan 17 to 7 a week ago, Michigan dropped its first Western conference fray Saturday with Indiana, 6 to 0.

The Wolverines are completely lost without a Friedman or a Oosterbaan in their lineup. Their playing this season has been far from the standard set up in previous years on the gridiron.

STATE ENTERS SECRET PRACTICE

FRESH from their victory over Northwestern by a 10 to 0 score, the Scarlet and Gray of Ohio State will enter secret preparations for the contest Saturday with Michigan.

Statistics showed that State was outplayed in practically every department of the game Saturday. In football games, it so happens that figures mean but little, that is—except those that indicate the final score. A team may trail in first downs, yards gained and so fourth but the thing that counts the most is to hold the big end of the final score.

By watching the ball, a trail is all coaches attempt to develop in a player. Ohio State won, Northwestern fumbled a lot, giving the Ohioans every possible chance to win.

FOOTBALL UPSETS ARE FEW

FOOTBALL upsets last week were few and far between. Out of three southern teams invading the east Saturday Virginia was the only one to give a good account of itself by holding Princeton to a 0 to 0 tie.

A crippled Yale team defeated Georgia, 27 to 0, while Harvard was walking over North Carolina, 20 to 0. Notre Dame's victory over Navy was more less expected as the service team has failed to show anything in the way of strength in opening games.

Pittsburgh was given quite a surprise by West Virginia. The Panthers lost 9 to 0 after a thrilling battle in which the playing of Baring featured.

WATCH EVERY HARDING PLAYER

WHEN Shelby, Bucyrus and Mansfield tackle the Harding high school gridders it would be well for them to watch every member of the local Red and Black team.

Of five touchdowns scored in Saturday's league game with Ashland, only two of them were scored by members of the Harding backfield.

The first came early in the game when Zimmer, an end, received a lateral pass that fooled the Ashland aggregation and was good for three yards.

Breaking through the Ashland line when a pass was attempted, Paxton was tackled by Zimmer. On the play Paxton dropped the ball and Perry grabbed and ran 50 yards for a touchdown.

A fast charging line also resulted in another score. After losing the ball on Ashland's 12 yard line, Harding blocked a punt that Peacock covered behind the goal line.

McAninch scored both of the backfield's touchdowns. One was a 75-yard return of a punt and the other a twisting dash through left tackle.

First Heisman Story To Appear In Tuesday's Star

AFTER 40 years in which he has been actively connected with the gridiron, the name of John W. Heisman is missing from the football rosters this fall.

To readers of The Star, however, his 30 years of experience as a football player and a coach will not be lost. Starting in Tuesday's edition, Dr. Heisman will write a series of daily features which he has appropriately named "Hundred in the Hall of Football Fame."

His stories are written in an interesting fashion covering the game from its earliest moments to the present time. Each article covers one player and included are the games in which that player was made famous. Heisman covers these plays with the eyes of the expert he truly is.

Produced Great Teams

During his many years in the game, Heisman produced some of the greatest teams these institutions ever boasted. His record is one glorious campaign after another. His football strategy amounts to genius.

His first article appearing Tuesday on the sport page deals with the "Father of American Football" Walter Camp. Heisman is listed as the successor of Camp on the gridiron today.

HARDING FIGHTS TO WIN

Marion Eleven Loses at Sidney

"DO OR DIE SPIRIT" GIVES MARION BIG EDGE OVER ASHLAND

Injuries No Serious Handicap in Second N. C. O. Tilt

BY KARL R. McELROY
Sports Editor, The Star

WHEN last Friday rolled around Coach Dewey Bobyer was driven almost to desperation over his starting line-up in the second North Central Ohio league game with Ashland the following day.

McAninch was suffering from a wrenched back, Ansley was walking around on crutches, Harden limped on a badly sprained ankle and Wise was likely to drop most any time with a charley horse.

One could hardly blame the Red and Black coach for feeling blue as everything had been going against his team this season. Injuries had been numerous, and every man taken out of the regular lineup meant a weak spot as his reserves were far below par in strength.

Still On Top

But Coach Bobyer failed to reckon with the fighting spirit of his team. In spite of all the crippled players the "do or die" spirit was there and Harding stepped out to a 31 to 7 victory over Starn's Ashland aggregation. As a result the Red and Black still flies at the top of the N. C. O. standings.

It was one of the best exhibitions of football put up by the locals this year. It was a game in which every player played his part and well.

It started off in the first three minutes of play when Zimmer received a lateral pass from Castner crossing the Ashland goal line. This was a surprise play that not only took Ashland off its feet but the Marion fans as well.

However the joy of the Harding fans was not very long-lived for a 25-yard run by Ashland on the Harding 30-yard line, placed the ball within scoring distance. Two plays later Paxton went through the center of the line to score.

Perry Scores

In the second quarter it was heads-up ball that gave the team their second score. Ashland attempted to pass but Zimmer broke through to tackle the passer before he could get rid of the ball. The ball shot into the air and Perry collected it, running 50 yards for a touchdown.

McAninch got into the game when Wise was forced to the sidelines from injuries. This strengthened Harding's defense and offense to a great extent, although McAninch did not have his old drive. However, in spite of this fact, McAninch carried the ball for a touchdown after receiving a punt in the third period. After shaking the men going down under the ball and with good interference the rest of the way he travelled 75 yards to score. He again scored with a 10-yard dash through left tackle in the fourth period.

Peacock Goes Hot

Peacock, who acted as captain during the game, recovered a blocked fumble behind the goal line to obtain Harding's fifth touchdown of the game.

Harding, with all her regulars in the lineup, would probably have scored even more touchdowns. Injuries slowed the team up to a great extent and several times the ball was within scoring distance but they lacked the punch to carry it across.

Ashland was not what one would consider a strong team. They attempted to cover up their weakness with deceptive plays and an elaborate aerial attack. They held a big advantage over Harding in punting.

GENARO DEFENDS TITLE

Toronto, Oct. 15—Frankie Genaro, national boxing association flyweight champion, will defend his title here tonight in a 10-round bout against French Belanger, who lost the title to Genaro.

CALDWELL HURT

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 15—Joe Caldwell, Princeton guard, is out of the lineup as the result of an injury to his back in Saturday's game with Virginia. Mike Miles, star defensive back, and Ed Wittmer, swifty back, also sustained injuries which will keep them out of the lineup for a time.

FIGHTERS COMPLETE TRAINING FOR FIRST CARD HERE TONIGHT

Interest Centers Around Development of Local Main-Go Boy

WITH final training routine completed, 10 boxers who will appear on the opening fall boxing card of the Eagles lodge at their gym tonight will weigh in this afternoon under the eyes of the Marion boxing commission.

Interest in the opening fight will be centered around efforts of local promoters in developing a local boy with main go intent. Four Marion boys will appear in six round bouts to follow a four round preliminary.

No main go is scheduled as the four six-round affairs are rated as of equal importance. The last bout of the evening between Ray Snyder of Marion and Allan Hines, Columbus, is expected to provide most of the excitement, however.

Other bouts slated over the six round route are:

Ernie Walker, Marion, vs. Squab Baker, Columbus. Both men colored weighing 105.

Wildcat Maloney, Marion, vs. Eddie Townley, Columbus, at 135 pounds.

Harold Williams, Marion, vs. Joe Mussey, Columbus, at 128 pounds.

The first bout will get under way at 8:15 o'clock.

EALS AGAIN LEADING

San Francisco, Oct. 15—The San Francisco Seals were again leading the Sacramento Solons today in the chase for championship honors of the Pacific Coast league. The Seals won yesterday by a score of 15 to 3, giving them the edge of three games to two.

'Tis Blue Monday on Most American Grid Campuses

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK, Oct. 15—Blue Monday on the campuses of collegiate America; blue Monday in the locker room where head coaches bend to their wash boards and try to freshen varsity linen in the suds of Saturday's developments. Blue Monday at the clothes line where many a garment will have that gray-blue tinge of the habitually soiled. Such, I fear, is the character of the wash they are hanging out this morning at Annapolis, Chicago and Michigan.

Sectional leaders at the very least in other years, this trio now is definitely relegated to the class slightly below Z and one, therefore, must alter his sense of values in dealing with them for the remainder of the season. I should say that the same thing applies in a slightly lesser sense to Pittsburgh, which lost to West Virginia, which previously lost to Davis-Elkins, and to Penn State, which is finishing behind Bucknell in successive seasons, reaffirmed the notion that, as a national contender, State's day has passed.

Only First Loses Surprising

Three straight defeats for the Navy are surprising only because it lost the first two. Apparently endowed with fair material, The Ingram dynasty happened to pick up a pair of live ones in Davis-Elkins and Boston college, but should have been able to take both in stride. It didn't need any explanation for its defeat by Notre Dame on Saturday, however. When the Irish win a ball game, even in an indifferent season, no footnotes go with the victory. The outcome of this game proved that Notre Dame hadn't lost the trick of making good on most of its scoring chances.

It also confirmed a prevailing impression that, as a reorganizer of defeated teams, Rockne is about the final word in coaching.

The defeats of Michigan and Chicago on Saturday unfortunately will go down in the books of the Big Ten conference where even such inane humorists as Yost and Stagg can't laugh them off or down. Yost, of course, stepped down or out or both just before the Wolverine lost its first game, but to every conference addict, Yost is Michigan and Miehlgan is almost Yost. Anyhow, it lost by a touchdown to Indiana on Saturday and evidently is headed nowhere in a body. Chicago lost to Iowa by 13 points, but that is another one you don't have to explain. The Hawkeye is said to have something this time. The other conference results ran quite according to the book, Ohio State beating Northwestern 10 to 0, and Minnesota showing something of its punch of two years ago in winning from Purdue by 15 to 0.

Look for Undefeated Teams

The cast already is becoming exercised about the Princeton-Ohio State game early next month, it being the contention that both figure to come up to this game undefeated. No one can guarantee anything of the sort after Saturday. Never a great scoring institution, even in its greatest years, Princeton clearly proved the truth of this observation when it failed to score at all against Virginia. The latter had no illusions about itself, particularly since its list of injuries reminded one forcibly of the unfortunate Yankees in the late world series, but it had plenty of fight. A scoreless tie was the result.

The three other eastern leaders, a status achieved largely by popular vote, did everything asked of them, Yale avenging its 1927 defeat beating Georgia, 21 to 0, Harvard showing nicely with a 20 to 0 victory over North Carolina, and Pennsylvania giving the rest of the section a distinct shock by rolling up 67 points on Swarthmore.

Wisconsin, conqueror of Notre Dame, won again, but didn't add much to its prestige in beating North Dakota Aggies by 13 to 7. The champion Illini also went outside the conference to give Coe a prodding by 30 to 0.

Missouri Runs Amuck

Another hot tip, Missouri, ran amuck after the manner of Pennsylvania. As a matter of fact, Missouri ran a terrible muck, as the fellow said, in beating Centre college by 60 points. The other valley conference leader, Nebraska, showed its usual power in winning from Montana State by 26 to 0.

California got away running in the conference race by winning from Washington State and Washington gained its annual victory over Montana by 25 points. Stanford, of course, went for a breather with the University of California, southern branch.

Southern Methodist down below the line, almost blew one to Simmons. Georgia Tech clearly declared itself with its 12 to 0 decision over Tulane and one might say the same for Alabama, with its 46 to 0 victory over Mississippi A. and M. That Davis-Elkins outfit likewise left nothing to the imagination in scoring 76 points on Bluefield.

I can't say whether Centenary surprised itself with its 6 to 0 victory over Texas A. and M. but I can guarantee this much: it astounded Texas A. and M. Mississippi blew a tough one to Tennessee by 13 to 12, and Pennsylvania beat Swarthmore 14 to 13.

Blue Monday; some of them are hanging out a lot of funny looking garments this morning.

OLYMPIC CLUB WINS

San Francisco, Oct. 15—The Olympic club football team administered a crushing defeat to the Young Men's Institute eleven here yesterday, winning by a score of 52 to 0. Morton Kaer, who was named on the All-American team while playing with Southern California, was the outstanding star of the game.

Droughts in Jamaica this year caused great damage.

SET NEW MARKS

Thoroughbreds Find Going to Liking at Tanforan

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 15—Finding the going to their liking at Tanforan race track yesterday, two thoroughbreds stepped out to break a pair of records.

Longridge, a three-year-old owned by W. H. Buckner, clipped a second off the track record made by Fair Orient when he ran the mile and 70 yards in 1:43 3-5.

Burr Winslow, a four-year-old gelding stopped five and one-half furlongs in 1:08 1-5, besting the record of Clatterton by one-fifth of a second.

FEATURE attractions for Saturday nights are being booked by the Marion Recreation Alleys it was announced today.

Games with out of town teams, two men team matches and contests for women bowlers are being planned.

VICTORS OUTPLAYED BUT MAKES PASSES GOOD; SCORE, 18-0

Local Pro Team to Play at Logan Next Sunday

SCORING twice as many first downs as down as their opponents, the Marion A. C. football team lost their first football game at Sidney yesterday afternoon, 18 to 0.

Two completed passes and one intercepted resulted in the Marion team going down in defeat. Griner scored in the first and last quarters while Kah went over the line in the second period.

Time after time Marion's drives would carry them down the field but the stiff defense of the Sidney aggregation in critical moments held the locals scoreless.

Shatto starred for Marion as a ball carrier while Johnson and Brooks did exceptionally fine work in the line. Next Sunday the locals will journey to Logan for their third game of the season.

The line-ups:

Marion, 0.	Pos.	Sidney, 18
Wagner	L. E.	Simmons
Graham	L. T.	Clawson
Long Tune Sleep	L. G.	Brandlmarz
Smith	C.	Schaulb
Brooks	R. G.	Tenney
Johnson	R. T.	Milner
Irvin	R. E.	Griner
Dean	Q. B.	Kah
Anthony	L. H.	Frazer
Shatto	R. H.	Dyler
Leahey	F. B.	Howell

Substitutions: Marion—McCombs for Anthony, Whitcum for Long Tune Sleep, Anthony for McCombs, Millam for Anthony.

Touchdowns: Griner, 2; Kah, 1.

Period score:

Sidney	6	6	0	6	18

High-Priced Industrials Register Gains Of 5 to 12 Points

MONEY RATE GOES UP TO 7 PER CENT

Copper Stocks Respond to Favorable Reports With Increases

CALUMET UP 13

Seven Favorites Continue Spirited Advance; Chrysler Up

JAMES COUSINS
Financial Editor

Oct. 15— Though hampered by the tightening of the money market and a fourth heavy week of stock taking and speculative liquidation, the forward movement in the list of leading industrial favorites was resumed today, with new gains of several points being recorded in most of the list.

A point run up in Calumet & Hecla Mining stock to 45, a new high, and the doubling of the cash dividend by the directors today, emphasized the ability of the market to rally promptly to unexpected strength. All of the copper stocks, which are regarded with higher prices as the result of favorable consumption figures and increased metal industry with the prospect of a further dwindling of the supply of refined metal in storage

Money is renewing at 6½ per cent the rate having been advanced to 7 per cent when the banks sent persistent calls to the stock market for funds to supply the needs of industry and agriculture. Over the long range the money market outlook is more favorable than for the balance of the current month, due to the burden of domestic financing which must be completed in the meantime. But news and industrial reports of the day were uniformly favorable in keeping with the developments of the last month or two in the business world.

Most of the speculative favorites of the last week started the day at higher price levels and continued to move forward sprightly. Chrysler inaugurated a new movement which carried the stock to 135, up four. Briggs followed those 62 for the first time. Montgomery Ward soared close to 400, Sears Roebuck to above 162, General Motors and U. S. Steel common scored new high price records for all time.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

Small shipments of vegetables arrived in Marion over the week-end local retail produce dealers report The fresh supplies were in poor condition as a result of the hot weather encountered while en-route, dealers say.

Not a single price variation was reported over the week-end. The poultry market became steady after a brief period of uncertainty resulting from large shipments arriving in Cleveland from the West to flood a market already overstocked as a result of slow sales.

Prices on chickens fell two consecutive days last week.

In spite of the continued delay in shipments of fresh supplies, products of all kinds are still obtainable here dealers report. All the best varieties may be bought, although the price is high, they say

TODAY'S REVIEW OF SATURDAY'S GRAIN

Chicag, Oct 15—This is a week during which the grain markets may develop a trend which will carry prices some distance in one direction or the other. For the last month or so the action of both wheat and corn has been so irregular that, although both those grains have covered a considerable range in that time they closed Saturday at not far from where they started

In what the situation is viewed as extremely bearish by the trade generally Big professionals see no chance for a bull market. They never have seen a chance of one since it first became apparent that the crops in Canada and this country would be very large this year

But in the face of this bearish conclusion, backed by short selling, wheat went up approximately 10 cents from the bottom After touching the top the market has been up and down by fits and starts

Wheat Looks Weak

But on Saturday wheat developed symptoms of weakness more marked it seemed, than any it has showed for some time. These came, too, when the market was dragging lower

The open interest in wheat has expanded during the last week or so decidedly On last Thursday, before the Friday holiday, it was 117,210,000 bushels

As explained here, this increased open interest makes for an oversold market if the price advances so as to make unloading the situation of the short, but on the other hand, if the market declines it makes for an overbought market.

There always comes a time when either the shorts are driven to cover or the longs to liquidate If wheat drops much lower than it closed on Saturday it may shake the confidence of bulls to the extent that they will try to liquidate In that case the decline might go considerably further.

Today a big increase in the visible supply is looked for, and this may be seized upon by bears as an excuse for pressing the selling side.

Corn appears to be in a different situation from wheat. That is, it appears to have underlying merit in the crop situation which may be lacking in wheat.

The trade is disposed to advise with care but use a run of new corn is threatened, but the new corn will be wanted as well as the old.

CLEARINGS REACH TOTAL OF $119,727

Increasing more than $70,000 over the total for the same day a week ago, bank clearings here Saturday amounted to $119,727 23, according to the record at clearing headquarters in the Marion National Bank today. The fact that the banks were closed Friday for Columbus day and that it was thus impossible to make deposits on that day is responsible for the unusual increase, bank officials say. Clearings for a week ago Saturday were $69,088.87.

2,600 SHARES SOLD

With sales totaling 2,600 shares, Marion Steam Shovel Co common stock registered a decline on the New York curb market during the week ending Friday, Oct 12 the closing quotation for the period being 38 1-4, approximately five points below the year's high mark The high for the week was 57 7-8 and the low 52.

DOMINICAN SISTERS PRAISE FATHER JOHN'S MEDICINE

"FOR COLDS AND BODY BUILDING IT DOES A WORLD OF GOOD," THEY WRITE

The Dominican Sisters of St. Dominic Monastery, La Crosse, Wisconsin have found that for treating and preventing colds and building up the aged and sickly, Father John's Medicine is so effective that they have used it daily for many years.

Following is part of a letter from the Mother Prioress:

"We have found out that there is nothing better than Father John's Medicine for colds, or building up the body. It always helps our weak or delicate sisters, and those who have cold soon recover and grow stronger. We cannot praise Father John's Medicine too highly. We cheerfully recommend it for colds and as a body builder and hope that all who use it may obtain the same wonderful results on we do; it does a world of good."

Father John's Medicine is absolutely free from alcohol and dangerous drugs. For 75 years it has won similar tributes of praise as the safe family medicine for colds and body building.—Adv.
